Cookies

Cookies are variable content alphanumeric information packets sent by the web server that is stored on the user's computer and stored for a predetermined validity period. The use of cookies allows to query some data of the website's visitor and track their internet usage. Cookies help to keep track of user's interests, internet usage patterns and the website visit history in order to ensure that the user's shopping experience is optimal. Since cookies are used as a kind of tag that allows a web page to recognize a visitor returning to the page, by using them valid username and password for that site can also be stored. If the browser sends back a previously stored cookie, service provider processing the cookie has the ability to link the current visit of the user to previous ones but only to relating to their own content.

The information sent by the cookies makes it easier to recognize web browsers therefore users can receive relevant and "personalized" content. Cookies make browsing more convenient, including online data security needs and relevant advertising. With the help of cookies, Service Provider can also create anonymous statistics on page viewers' habits, so can better customize the look and content of the page.

Service Provider's website uses two types of cookies:

- Temporary Cookies (required) – session use (session-id) cookies necessary for the use of the website. Their use is essential for navigating on and for the functioning of the website. Without them, the site or parts of it will not be displayed, browsing becomes obstructed, placing tickets in the basket or bank payment cannot be properly implemented.
- Permanent cookies (analytic and marketing/advertising) that will remain on the device, depending on the settings of the web browser, for a long time or until they are deleted by the user. Within these there are internal and external cookies. Internal cookies are created if Service Provider's server installs the cookie and the data is forwarded to its own database. If the cookie is installed by the Service Provider's server, but the data is forwarded to an external service provider, external cookie is used. Third party cookies placed by a third party in the user's browser (Google Analytics, Facebook Pixel) are external cookies. These are put in the browser if the visited website uses services provided by a third party. The purpose of permanent cookies is to ensure that the site operates at the highest level in order to increase user experience.

When visiting the website User can give their consent to storing permanent cookies stored on their computer that can be accessed by Service Provider by clicking on the cookie alert button on the sign in page.

User can configure and prevent cookie related activities by using the browser program. Use To manage cookies, user can usually use the Cookies or Cookie tracing option in Privacy/History/Custom Settings menu under Tools/Settings menu of their browser. Please note however that without the use of cookies it is possible that User will not be able to every service provided by the website, thus especially the payment options.

Purpose of data processing: carrying out payment transactions with the payment service provider, identifying and distinguishing users, identifying user's current session, storing data created during the session, preventing data loss, identifying and tracking users, web analytics.

Scope of processed data: identification number, date, time and the previously visited webpage.

Period of data processing: temporary cookies are stored until all websites of the same type are closed.

Permanent cookies are stored on user`s computer for a year or until user deletes them.

Possible consequences of failure to provide data: unavailability of certain services of the website, unsuccessful payment transactions, inaccuracies in analytics.
